Everyone of the ten thousand, sixty-six seats had an occupant and it looked like about half the population of San Francisco was hanging around outside the auditorium yearning to get in. Following the impressive opening prayer by Monsignor P. L. Ryan, vicar-general of the diocese of the San Francisco Catholic Church, an official photograph was made by means of a tremendous flashlight which carried the flame fully five feet in height and lighted the great expanse as if by the sun.

C. C. Keesling, who spent several months in Wrangell last year working as a boat builder, arrived here this week from Anacortes and will remain in Southeastern Alaska indefinitely.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Presbyterian Church will meet on July 7, at the home of Mrs. Geo. Barnes, Mrs. E. Barnes entertaining.

Tuesday night a Mexican was brought in from Shakan for medical attention. The Mexican had been acting queerly for some time, and it was thought possible that his mind is affected. He is under the surveillance of Deputy U. S. Marshal Dalgity.

Wrangell Man Builds New Type of Boat

Probably the most unusual boat ever built in Alaska was launched Sunday afternoon by Otto Vieweg, the owner and builder. Sylvia is the name that has been given to this new craft which is entirely out of the ordinary. While it is modeled somewhat on the lines of a sea sled it is mainly Mr. Vieweg's own idea of a craft suitable for traffic on the Stikine river.

The boat is 30 feet long and has five tons capacity. It could be made to accommodate 20 persons if used for passenger service.

The boat is equipped with a 125 h. p. four cylinder opposed engine which is expected to develop a speed of 12 miles an hour. The most unusual feature of the boat lies in its being driven by an air propeller, the propeller having direct connection with the engine. The Sylvia draws only 4½ inches, and when in motion skims the water with scarcely any displacement.

Mr. Vieweg is a young man who has recently attained his majority. He is employed as a machinist in the Wrangell Machine Shop. He has constructed his boat by working after hours, and his friends hope to see his new departure in boat construction turn out to be a success.

There were quite a number of spectators on the dock when the Sylvia was having its first try-out Sunday evening. When it was skimming over the water it looked like a flying machine that was apt to rise from the water at any moment.

It is reported that Mr. Vieweg will have his boat out on the water again during the Fourth of July celebration.

A Rare Musical Treat

Mrs. John T. Towers of Seattle
Sings at Concert Given by
St. Philip's Guild

Musical lovers were given a decided treat last Friday night when a concert was given at the gymnasium for the benefit of St. Philip's Guild by Mrs. John T. Towers of Seattle. From the first piano solo to the closing song, the program was received with delight by those who were fortunate enough to hear it. Judging by the spontaneous applause which followed their rendition, the Southern melodies struck a responsive chord while the Barcarolle from Tales of Hoffman and the stately rhythm of the Pilgrim Chorus were equally enjoyable. Mrs. Towers' beautiful voice and charming personality made the lighter song numbers irresistibly appealing while her wonderful technique was very evident throughout. "Ma Curly Headed Baby" was a gem and it and the Ardit number were evidently the favorites. Mr. Upshaw added much to the success of the evening by his mandolin accompaniments in several of the selections, the obligatos in some of the vocal numbers being especially effective.

The Guild realized nearly $55 from the evening's entertainment for which it is greatly indebted to Mrs. Towers and Mr. Upshaw. The money will be used for the new walk on Church street.

The road appropriation for Alaska has been raised from $100,000 to $350,000 for this year.

Crab Cannery Is Latest Project For Wrangell

That Wrangell is to have a crab canning plant is an assured fact, according to A. H. Range of Portland who was here last week working on the proposition.

Mr. Range recently patented a machine for extracting crab meat from the shells by means of compressed air. One of these machines will do the work of 15 hand pickers. This invention puts the crab canning business on an entirely new basis.

Several local business men met with Mr. Range Thursday evening to go over his proposition with him. After he had outlined his plan one of the gentlemen present asked C. M. Coulter, the local fish buyer, if he thought there was a plentiful supply of crabs in this locality. Mr. Coulter replied: "I fished crabs in these local waters for more than two years, and I consider Wrangell the center of crab supply in Southeastern Alaska. The fishing grounds within a radius of 50 miles contain a supply of crabs that is practically inexhaustible."

Mr. Range stated that before beginning operations he would have to sell another block of stock, and that he would like to give Wrangell people the first chance at it. He said he believed it good policy to have local business men interested as stockholders, as the company would thereby be assured of the cooperation of at least the representative citizens of Wrangell.

The following local citizens then showed their faith in the feasibility of the proposition by subscribing for stock:

Hon. P. C. McCormack, president of the St. Michael's Trading company.

Mayor J. G. Grant, proprietor Wrangell hotel.

Donald Sinclair, owner of the City Store.

George H. Barnes, of the Alaska Sanitary Packing Co.

H. D. Campbell, contractor.

All of the above gentlemen, with the exception of Mr. McCormack, are members of the Wrangell city council.

Mr. Range stated that he would leave the subscription list with Mayor Grant in order that any others who might become interested in the proposition would have an opportunity to subscribe for stock.

Mr. Range was asked to read the complete list of the stockholders. He gladly responded to the request, and among the stockholders we noted the following:

F. P. Kendall, district manager, Northwestern District, American Can company.

D. L. Carpenter, president of the Canoe Packing company.

H. D. Gill, practical canneryman who has spent several seasons in Alaska.

Mr. Range stated a number of facts concerning crab canning that are not generally known. He said that in the past Japan has been the world's largest producer of canned crab, and that the United States has been the greatest consumer of this product. Owing to the intensive fishing in Japan for many years the crab supply in Japanese waters has been depleted to a considerable extent. In order to prevent this industry from being lost entirely the Japanese government has recently imposed severe fishing restrictions. It is therefore plain to be seen that during the next few years Japan's crab output will be so small that it will have practically

WYATT-PETERS

MARRIED—L. L. Wyatt and Miss Lois Peters, in Chelalis, Washington, on Monday, June 21, 1920, Justice Westover officiating.

The above news came somewhat as a surprise. Mr. Wyatt left Wrangell on June 12 for a short trip to the States. There was nothing in his manner that indicated that he was going away on a mission of such great importance. When he arrived home his many friends were surprised to learn that he had not returned alone, but had brought an attractive young wife with him. Mr. and Mrs. Wyatt will make their home in Wrangell. The Sentinel extends congratulations.

St. Philip's Guild will meet with Mrs. Charles Binkley next Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Hundreds of Shriners Were Here Tuesday

Tuesday was the liveliest day in Wrangell for many moons. In less than half a day three boat loads of Shriners were here. The Princess Alice arrived at 4 a. m. The Nobles aboard were all asleep and they were in mercy permitted to sleep on undisturbed.

The Spokane arrived at 7 a. m. That hour was also entirely too early for people who had not yet had time to recover from the big Shrine convention in Portland. Only a few of the boys with the red fezzes appeared on the deck. When the vessel tied up they came ashore and proved to be such good fellows that the towns people were disappointed in not getting to see a greater number of them.

The arrival of the Jefferson a the more respectable hour of 10 was entirely different from that of the other boats, and was SOMI event. The decks were thronged with Shriners and their ladies. A chorus of men's singing, and before the vesse had tied up the local people knew that the town would soon be over run with Shriners. The Jefferson had been chartered by the organization for the trip. This no table party was in charge of Potentate Beumont King of Affit temple, Tacoma. Upon coming ashore Mayor Grant presented the potentate with the key to the city. Richard Suratt, Alaska representative of the Gaumon Weekly, was on hand with his moving picture machine and secured some excellent pictures.

The visiting Nobles found the business portion of the town beautifully decorated in honor of their coming. There was an arch of welcome between the hotel and the ticket office. Shrine emblems were everywhere in evidence. The totem pole by Matheson's store had on its top an Affit fez. This made a great hit with the visitors and many snapshots of it were taken.

The Shrine patrol in uniform gave an exhibition of marching which was very beautiful and brought forth vociferous applause from a large number of spectators.

The Nobles then went in a body to the east end of town, visiting the totems in the vicinity of Shakes' island. Rev. H. P. Corser, author of Totem Lore, entertained the visitors by explaining the meaning of several of the totems.

The Jefferson took on two passengers here. Albert F. Hennes, inspector for the National Cannerymen's association could not resist joining the party. Mr. Hennes is affiliated with Nile Temple, Seattle. Dr. Shurick was taken along as a novice. When he returns he will be wearing a red fez.

A Card of Thanks

Editor Sentinel:
On behalf of the local Shriners I wish to thank the citizens of Wrangell for the splendid showing they made in decorating in honor of the visiting Shriners Tuesday.

The arrival of the boats at an earlier hour than was expected made it necessary for the decorating to be done at an outrageously early hour, but it was done nevertheless, and done well. As a result the visiting Nobles who came from all parts of the United States will carry home with them a favorable impression of Wrangell and its people.

Vice President Southeastern
Alaska Shrine Club.

Petersburg Notes

(Report)

A striking new addition to the trolling fleet is the gasboat Dorothy, which was built during the past winter by L. J. Israelson. The new boat was given its tryout last Sunday and is a trim and comfortable little craft.

Two piling camps, those operated by Neil McDonald and T. J. McBride and partner, have quit work for the season and the floats and engines were brought to Petersburg this week. Both camp operators report a very successful season during the past winter and spring.

That the cannery of the Mt., Point Packing company, which was destroyed by fire recently, will be rebuilt during the present season, was the statement made by R. C. Harley, president of that concern, before leaving for the South on the Spokane. Men are at work clearing away the wreckage, and the work of building will start within a short time. They do not intend to attempt to operate this season but will build and have everything ready for the next season's fishing. "We have the wharf and other buildings there and could not afford to seek a new location," said Mr. Harley. "The new cannery will be a one line plant, the same size as the one destroyed. I believe that the small cannery will be the money maker of the future," he said.

The McMillan company, publishers, are preparing a new school geography which will be a radical departure from the old school books which depicted Alaskans driving reindeer and living off polar bears and seals. Much of the responsibility for a wrong impression of Alaska has been received from old text books and it is intended to revise these showing the many advantages of the North and its possibilities. Photographs of mining and farming and fishing are wanted by the publishers.

Ralph B. Kenyon, secretary of the Yakima Valley Business Men's association, was aboard the Alaska which was in port Saturday afternoon. Mr. Kenyon was en route to Valdez. It is probable that he will stop off in Wrangell for a few days on his return.

The many friends of Captain Nord were given the opportunity of greeting him again when the Alaska called at this port Saturday afternoon. Captain Nord was on the Jefferson for many years and was known to every person in Wrangell. A. H. Morgan, who was the purser on the Mariposa when she was wrecked, is now the purser on the Alaska.

Ed. L. Whittemore, a well known resident of Seward, was aboard the Alaska en route to his home after a visit in California.

G. S. Chapin, superintendent of the cannery of the Karheen Packing company, was a business visitor to Wrangell the first of the week.

Guests Must Behave

James Larkin, who is under indictment in New York on a charge of criminal anarchy, told the court on Monday that it had no right to try him because he is a citizen of the Irish "republic," and only a "guest" of the United States. Anyone who has the idea that as a guest of the United States he is privileged to violate its laws cannot be disabused too emphatically. —Buffalo Express.

Martyr to Idea of Duty.

Lighthouse keepers sometimes become so imbued with the lofty concept of attention to duty that a devotion to their work becomes a mania. An old man who spent most of this life looking after a light on the gulf coast refused in his later years to ever absent himself from his post. One night a ship foundered near the station. He believed the wreck due to some failure of the light, and, despite assurances to the contrary, went out into the storm to investigate. A few days later he died from an illness caused by the exposure.

Famous Midgets.

Tom Thumb, whose real name was Charles Sherwood Stratton, died in Middleboro, Mass., July 15, 1883. He was born at Bridgeport, Conn., in January, 1838, and was 14 years old when first engaged by P. T. Barnum, the showman, who dubbed him General Tom Thumb. At that time Stratton was less than two feet high and weighed sixteen pounds. In 1863 Lavinia Warren, also a dwarf, was married to Stratton. Mrs. Tom Thumb was known in private life as the Countess Magri, having been married three years after the death of Stratton to Count Magri, an Italian by birth and also a midget.

RUSSIA'S LONG, BLACK NIGHT

Little Wonder People of That Unhappy Land Are Blinded by Freedom's Light After Four Centuries of Suffering.

Article XV

By FRANK COMERFORD.

For nearly four hundred years Russia waited for morning. It was a terrible night. Brutal dreams tortured her. She writhed in despair. Time moved slowly. The clock ticked agonies. The air was thick with groans. Motherhood bore slaves. The cradle was a coffin. Feast days were celebrated by massacres. Czars from Ivan the Terrible, 1544, to Nicholas, the last of the Romanoffs, executed in 1918, used the bodies and souls of human beings as manure to fertilize the soil in which the rank weed of imperialism grew. History calls them emperors, truth labels them brutes, torturers, murderers. They bore the brand of Cain.

It was a lightless day, a hopeless night, for Russia, which began with the curses of Ivan and ended with the execution of Nicholas. During this night of three hundred and seventy-five years they marched the treadmill. The world heard the endless tramp of feet. In the dark, great bodies swayed with weariness. Heavy shoulders were bent forward. Strong legs marked time on the treadmill steps. They kept time to the lash of the whip. It laid bare their backs, the backs of young and old, of women and children as well as men. Sweat formed into red froth as it mingled with their blood. They grew blind in the dungeon darkness. They stumbled and halted, only to be called back to the monotony and drudgery of the tramp by the lash and the bludgeon. Their legs rose and fell—they marched, but never forward. It was left, right, left, right; tramp, tramp, and always on the treadmill steps in the hopeless dark. They mumbled prayers, but God couldn't hear, the curses of their masters drowned out their petitionings. It was so dark in the treadmill that even God could not see, and so God forgot Russia. Forgotten, abandoned, they bent their great weary backs toward the sod, the grave offered rest—it was kind. The only thing they owned was their pains. They lived a communism of suffering, a socialism of slavery.

The revolution of 1917 battered down the door of the treadmill. Seized with wild joy, they madly rushed toward the light. When they got out in the open, saw the sky and sun, they were bewildered. In the fury of a new delight they rushed on. It isn't strange, it is pathetic, that eyes blinded by ages of darkness blinked in the light. It isn't surprising that they tried to reach the center of the sun. Suffering in the light is different from suffering in the black the Russians knew.

When their eyes became accustomed to the light they looked around them to see where they were—to learn what had been happening in the strange, beautiful world.

Tremendous Task Before Them.

They had a task before them, the building of a free man's house, a house in the light, a house without a dark corner. They knew little about freedom, except that they wanted it with all their hearts. Their experience had been with slavery. They knew little about the practical work of building a house in which freedom might live pure and secure.

They saw civilization with the eyes of a surgeon. They gasped when they saw that its body was covered with a malignant sore. It was an ugly, festering, running, growing sore. They learned its name. It was written in the loudest of chronicles—it was the incurable, horrible leprosy of the world. It was cancer—POVERTY. They were told that it was the cause of the nasty thing religion labeled sin, that poverty had transformed Christ images struck in clay into hunch-backed souls, that the sickening matter running from sores caused the red blotches on the world's body known as red-light districts; that other effects were the swollen blackish blue boils, the tenements and slums. They shuddered. Even the darkness of the treadmill had not produced worse.

They learned about poverty. They read its autobiography. In it they read how it had robbed children of their childhood, erased faith from the minds of men, mobilized women in dreadful traffic. They learned that much of the thing called crime was poverty's work, that normality and morality are matters of education. That to be good requires knowledge of right and wrong. They read that statesmen called poverty THE PROBLEM. Reformers called it a curse and became unpopular because of their persistent attacks upon it. In the verdict of a thoughtless world those who fought poverty were called long-haired men and short-haired women. People did not stop to remember that these long-haired men and short-haired women gave of their time and strength to the poor. These who were maligned for following in the footsteps of the first Lover of the Poor were those who cried out against the tenements, demanding for human beings the sunshine and air cattlemen give their stock. These unpopular ones were the same who brought ice to keep milk cool in the hot summer for the children of the slums; these were the crusaders against child labor, the protestants against compelling the women who bear the children of the race to work so many hours each day that exhaustion marred and marked the physical and mental strength of children.

So it was that these redeemed, freed children of Russia learned of the cancer and feared it as much as the thing they had escaped.

None Able to Check Disease. They beheld old-school politicians acting as doctors to sick civilization. These doctors, misnamed statesmen, were agreed as to the cause of the disease and that the symptoms threatened death. Many prescriptions have been given the patient, but none seem to check the disease. These prescriptions had been various formulas of government, the constitutional monarchy, a democracy, a republic. The giving of these various treatments failed to effect a cure. Civilization continued to suffer. At times pain became unendurable and the doctors gave local anesthetics. These were the laws, included under the general designation "Social Welfare Legislation." They made the patient temporarily more easy. They allayed pain that might otherwise have produced convulsions—Revolution.

And then these Russian people, studying the new world into which they had so recently come, discovered that many of these political doctors were quacks, they were unreliable and dishonest. They were more interested in their own fortunes than the fate of the patient. They imposed upon the people who hired and trusted them. Their time and thought was taken up in holding their jobs, rather than in doing their work. That the schools of political medicine, called political parties, responsible for these doctors, were diploma mills, graft rings. That some of the people suspected these physicians of being interested in keeping the patient sick and were not making an honest effort to cure. It had even been rumored that there are people in the world who make profit out of poverty; that special privilege is the powerful profiteer of our day.

Turned to Old Theory.

Plato had spoken about another remedy way back in the fourth century before Christ. So had Marx. An untried remedy—a theory. Its object was to cure poverty. The Russians, seeing that the remedies in common use had failed, turned their thoughts to this old remedy which had never been tried. At least it had not failed; this was in its favor. It was an experiment, to be sure, but "Nothing ventured, nothing gained." Many argued that it could not more completely fall than the prescriptions at present in use.

And with the fall of imperialism there came into Russia one who had been exiled. For many years he had been a teacher and preacher of the untried remedy. Russia saw in him a savior. He came with a message. He said that communism would keep them free, make them happy. They listened, they believed. They were as little children, so great was their faith. To them a promise was a truth fulfilled, the word a covenant; and the promise was that peasants would have their own land, that working men would be their own bosses. It was the word they had waited for, the realization of the dreams they had dreamed in the dark treadmill. The Prophet had come. The new day awaited them. They rejoiced and cried, "Long live the new Messiah." No one sacrilegiously questioned the practicability of the dream. Every one forgot the common, controlling instinct of man—selfishness. Maybe in the intense general selfishness individual selfishness could not be seen.

The man was Lenin—the message Communism.

Food Smuggling in Germany. Illicit trade in food, with its attendant evils of smuggling and usury, is on the increase throughout Germany, according to newspaper accounts.

The rationing system has never been abandoned even in the occupied areas of the Rhineland, and some of the newspapers contend that the average individual can not subsist on the amount of food issued. The authorities are making every effort to check the illegal traffic in foods of all kinds, and the courts are crowded day after day.

Smuggling of potatoes is being carried on this winter in all parts of Germany on a scale greater than in war time. Germany produced an excellent potato crop this year, and the authorities are trying to save it from falling into the hands of the speculators.

Industrial Italy Awakening.

One great stride toward freeing industrial Italy from its dependence upon its supplies of iron ore and steel is announced. This consists in the acquisition of the rights of a big Austrian mining company hitherto known as the Alpine Montan Gesellschaft. These rights comprise control of one of the largest steel-producing districts in Europe. From its foundries at Erzberg in Styria alone the annual pre-war output exceeded 1,000,000 tons of finest quality steel. Experts estimate that the mine there can be worked advantageously for at least 200 years to come.

no influence on the market in this country. Within the last decade the Japanese crab pack has fallen off from 900,000 cases annually to 100,000 cases last year. Mr. Range stated that he would not can any cabs less than six inches in size, and this policy meant that his cannery would have no perceptible influence on the crab supply in these waters.

Canned crab has always commanded a good price for the reason that the market for this product has never been glutted, and much of the time the supply has not been equal to the demand. In order to show the remarkable increase in the price of canned crab during the past five years Mr. Range produced government statistics showing that in 1914 the United States imported 2,070,813 pounds of crab from Japan valued at $355,684 while in 1919 we received from Japan 1,704,565 pounds of crab valued at $704,565. Mr. Range says that when it became known that he proposed to start a crab cannery in Alaska one of the largest and most reliable brokerage firms in the country sent one of their representatives to Portland to interview him regarding the handling of his entire output.

Before putting his proposition up to the local people Mr. Range spent a week going over the fishing grounds within a reasonable radius of Wrangell and found crabs in great abundance everywhere he went. He says he was thoroughly convinced that a crab cannery here would be a dividend payer before he decided to embark in that business in Wrangell.

When asked what would be the amount of his payroll Mr. Range stated that he would spend about $100 a day for labor and about $600 a day for raw supplies. He further stated that fishermen should find crab fishing quite profitable. One man can readily handle 25 traps a day. These traps should average two dozen crabs each per day. At 50 cents per dozen this would mean $25 a day for the fisherman. When Mr. Range returns he will bring enough iron with him to make the frames for 600 traps. He says that the business of crab fishing could be combined most advantageously with that of trapping, thereby enabling the crab fisherman to greatly increase his income.

The crab season starts August 15 and continues until June 15 of the following year.

Mr. Range claims to be a thoroughly practical man in his line. He was six years in the fruit and vegetable business. For the past 12 years he has been in the fishing game. From 1916 to 1919 he was in Siberia canning crabs for the firm of Groochestys & company of Petrograd. This work was in reality for the Russian government as during that time the entire pack was each year taken over by the government.

Save Pennies—Waste Dollars

Some users of printing save pennies by getting inferior work and lose dollars through lack of advertising value in the work they get. Printers as a rule charge very reasonable prices, for none of them get rich although nearly all of them work hard.

PAJAMAS AMONG SNAKES.

When Northern Pacific train No. 41 was derailed at dawn near Pasco, Ida., recently, five of the coaches were overturned and badly smashed, but none of the passengers was injured beyond slight bruises. Sixteen rattlesnakes which escaped from their crate caused more excitement than all the rest of the wreck.

About one hundred passengers, still attired in night robes, made a wild scramble for the tops of the coaches when the rattlers began to announce their presence, though the baggagemen stuck to their jobs and rounded up all but one of the reptiles, which belonged to a traveling carnival company. When the train reached Yakima the passengers received their baggage gingerly, because the viper was believed to be secreted in the baggage car, which had been attached to the relief train.

CLOSER QUARTERS.

"It's a shame the way people are packed into these trolley cars like sardines," exclaimed the fussy old gentleman. "There's hardly room to draw a long breath."

"I've traveled with much less comfort," said a husky young man as he gently but firmly removed a fellow passenger's elbow from the pit of his stomach.

"Where, sir? Where, sir?" "I was once headed for Germany in a tank."—Birmingham Age-Herald.
